PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Jeremy Mills Publishing has extensive experience of managing small and large projects and with in-house editorial and design teams, is able to oversee projects from start to finish.

Projects we have managed previously include books, journals, newsletters, magazines, art catalogues and conference proceedings.

Each project is assigned a manager who works with clients throughout the editorial, design and production processes and ensures that the expectations of the client are met. In addition to managing the progress of the publication, the service involves providing prices, assisting with copyright legislation and giving advice on sales and marketing issues and final pricing.

Indeed, our budget management means that many of our clients save considerable amounts of money, particularly as we are able to negotiate lower prices through specialist suppliers.
